

ORAL HYGIENE

The Power of Essential Oils

Essential oils are ideal for use in oral care products because they are both antiseptic and non-toxic—a rare combination. Jean Valnet, M.D., who used essential oils for decades in his clinical practice, emphasized, “Essential oils are especially valuable as antiseptics because their aggression toward microbial germs is matched by their total harmlessness toward tissue.”

Young Living oral hygiene products include:

Dentarome Toothpaste

Dentarome is formulated with pure, natural ingredients. In addition, it uses an exclusive formula of uniquely antiseptic and antimicrobial therapeutic-grade essential oils to combat plaque-causing microorganisms. Together with other breath-freshening essential oils such as spearmint, Dentarome leaves the mouth fresh, fragrant and clean.

Dentarome Plus includes a higher concentration of thymol and eugenol for extra antiseptic action.

Fresh Essence Mouthwash

Fresh Essence uses an exclusive formula of medicinal-grade essential oils, such as thyme, lemon, cinnamon, clove, eucalyptus, birch, and peppermint, that naturally contain compounds clinically proven to kill the bacteria that can cause bad breath, plaque, and gum diseases such as gingivitis.

Fresh Essence is formulated with a revolutionary patented liposome technology that binds the essential oils to the mucous membranes inside the mouth. This enables the essential oils to remain in the mouth for extended periods of time for long-lasting, germ-killing and breath-freshening protection.

at a glance

- All of Young Living's oral hygiene products use therapeutic-grade essential oils at the heart of their formulas.
- Essential oils such as thymol, menthol and eucalyptol have been used in mouth rinses for over 100 years.
- Of 50 plant essential oils examined by University of Georgia researchers Deans and Riche in 1987, thyme oil was the most inhibitory against 25 genera of bacteria.
- Eugenol, a major constituent of clove oil, possesses significant antimicrobial activity.
